1 BROOKLYN BRIDGE PARK: THE ONE FOR MEETING FRIENDS

If you had stopped by the Brooklyn Bridge waterfront a few years ago and saw it today, you wouldn't believe the transformation. This park has amped up in accordance with the huge swell of population heading to Brooklyn; barbecue structures, playgrounds, plenty of grass for picnics and even courts for all sorts of sports like football, basketball, volleyball, etc. Oh and not to forget the views of lower Manhattan, Statue of Liberty and the bridges over the East River to make the day even more surreal.

2 SUNSET PARK: THE ONE FOR THE BEST SUNSET (DUH)

As dusk approaches, this park certainly lives up to its name and hopefully you'll get to enjoy the NYC sunset after a full day of exploring this cool little neighbourhood on the river. Bustling shops and restaurants represent nationalities from all over the world and while this little corner of Brooklyn has not yet fallen victim to such gentrification as its neighbours, will it really remain a forgotten enclave much longer with such incredible views available?

3 HILLSIDE PARK: THE ONE TO BRING THE DOG

Let the dog run free in this park stretching over a blissful two acres in Brooklyn Heights. The woodchip-covered ground is perfect for rambunctious play and plenty of trees abound for racing around.

Multiple entrances, water fountains for both dogs and humans alike, and park benches and tables lend a friendly neighbourhood feel to this park where your dog can run himself and his friends ragged!

4 PROSPECT PARK: THE ONE WITH EVERYTHING

When you're just looking for a lovely, large green space that has everything: Picnics, cycling, running (3k loop around the perimeter), and one of our favourite aspects, the Imagination Playground to bring the kids. Check out the recently renovated Prospect Park Lake and if you have a dog, there are certain off-leash hours. You can't go wrong with hanging out for a day in this park with friends for a barbecued picnic, just pure bliss on a sunny day.

5 PIER 6 PLAYGROUND: THE ONE TO BRING THE KIDS

While in Brooklyn Bridge Park or strolling the markets in DUMBO, make sure to take time to visit the Pier 6 Playground for a few hours that are guaranteed to tire the kids out while the grown-ups can relax at the wayside. Clean bathrooms, a food court and not to mention the unrivalled views of lower Manhattan make this a perfect destination for families on a day out.
